Readers show their support for Ukraine

In issue 99 of The Week Junior, we invited readers to create a poster for peace in Ukraine and send it to us. We were inundated with creative and caring drawings and messages! Thank you to everyone who has participated. We are sharing a few of the submissions we’ve received on these pages. If you would like to make a poster, go to theweekjunior.com/ukraine with an adult to print out the template. When you’re done, you can take a photo of yourself holding it and email it to us at hello@theweekjunior.com. An adult can also share it on social media using #StandWithUkraine and tag us at @theweekjunior.

“I wanted my poster to be a heart to match the colors of Ukraine’s flag and show the people of Ukraine that we are hoping for their freedom. Ukraine is the breadbasket of Europe, so I included some drawings of their crops. Flowers are a symbol of new beginnings, so I hope they can find their freedom again.”

“I drew a Ukrainian girl reaching out a hand for help with a gentle smile. My dad is Ukrainian and I have family in Ukraine. I wanted to support them, so I tried my best at this drawing.”

“My poster is about creating peace in the world so that the Ukrainians can be safe. I am proud that there are organizations to help Ukraine stand strong and help the families and the people around them.”

“I was really concerned about the war between Russia and Ukraine. So when I saw your poster I was really happy that I could do something about it. I feel sad about the children who were stranded and I love the United Nations so I added into my poster, Support UNICEF. I hope Russia will start being sensible and stop trying to take over Ukraine.”
